

Cataloger's Desktop

An all new look and feel is coming to Cataloger's Desktop in September 2014. LC recently talked to Desktop subscribers and was told that catalogers want a simpler, cleaner user interface that makes it easier to refine searches and navigate. Users also want more robust online help and training.

The new Cataloger's Desktop will put the focus on search and retrieval, rather than on table of contents browsing. This "Search First" approach to resource discovery will make it easier to find cataloging instructions without needing to know where to look.

Subscribers will be able to refine searches using facets that quickly focus searches on fewer, higher quality hits. Each hit will have more useful information to simplify finding the answer to your question.

The new Cataloger's Desktop comes with a clean look designed for clarity and flexibility. From the opening page, you will be able to focus searching your resources, core resources, or all of Cataloger's Desktop's resources.

Objective

The objective of this rule interpretation is to provide guidelines for the treatment of prefixes/particles (articles and prepositions) in certain names. Once a name and the appropriate references have been determined according to the appropriate rules, use the following guidelines in formulating the constituent parts of the name heading and references.

Guidelines

- 1) General. Apply these guidelines, as appropriate, to
 - a) the heading and to references in a name authority record;
 - b) a main or added entry (including subject) in a MARC bibliographic record.

In the examples used in the guidelines, only the germane references have been shown.

- 2) Prefix/particle immediately following the entry element. If the entry element of a name is followed directly by a prefix/particle without intervening data (e.g., forename(s), name(s) serving the function of a forename as in the case of certain Portuguese names, forename initial(s)), separate the prefix/particle from the entry element by a comma and place the prefix/particle, etc., in the MARC record as part of the $c subfield, the subfield for words and phrases associated with the name. The purpose of this practice is to provide consistent treatment in setting off the entry element of such names for reasons of searching and sorting, i.e., to prevent prefixes/particles from being treated as forenames.

Contents appear on the left when you select an item. You can print, email, bookmark, or make URL shortcuts from this view. Both the Contents to the left and the blue links over the document show where you are in a resource and allow you to navigate to other locations.

By clicking Contents on the blue ribbon, you can explore and search resources by title, by material type, and by cataloging task. This allows you to choose the path that best meets your needs.
